An endangered animal is one that is at risk of becoming extinct or at risk of no longer being in existence. Dinosaurs are the largest group of animals to have ever become extinct. Other creatures to have become extinct are dodo birds, mammoths, and saber toothed cat and many more. Endangerment of animals is occurring at an alarming rate due to environmental changes, the destruction of habitat, the shortage of food supply, and being hunted. Many of these causes are preventable if more people were educated about the dangers of their habits. Unfortunately, many areas that used to be home to a lot of animals, have been turned into places where humans now either live or spend time, such as a subdivision or mall. Other animals are being hunted by humans who are seeking money, not considering the long-term effects of their actions. Fortunately, many laws are being enforced to help prevent complete extinction of many species. As with any law, there are people, known as poachers, who ignore them and will still kill animals for either their fur or meat.

The passage illustrates the career choices of Brighton University's 2019 graduates, giving the percentages who worked in each of various sectors after finishing university. Overwhelmingly, industry and government were the most popular choices. Just under half the students went into industry, with service industries attracting more Brighton graduates than any other sector by far – almost a third (33.0%). About half that number (16.3%) took jobs in manufacturing. Politics and public service were the next most popular choice, accounting for nearly a fifth of graduates. Just over 12% went into politics and a further 5.6% chose the civil service. The other significant career choices were education (about 15%) and two others: transportation and warehousing, with 7.8%; and science and technology with 7.3%. The least popular choices included work in the charitable sector and careers in sport, both of which were chosen by well under 1% of graduates. Finally, 2.8% entered work in other, unspecified sectors.
